ADDITIONAL INFORMATION

Giulio Rossetti started his PhD in 2012 in the KDD Laboratory of the University of Pisa/CNR-ISTI. At the time, the group's main research focused on human mobility. There, he proposed a project on dynamic networks to support a novel research line at the time of interest for the laboratory: social network analysis. During the first year of his PhD, Giulio remained the only one focusing on such research direction, mainly due to the senior researcher on the topic changing affiliation. This prompted him to search for collaboration outside the laboratory, which forced him to grow in independence. After his Ph.D., Giulio decided to push for revitalizing such a research line within the group, and in a relatively short time (2015-2018), he was able to recreate a research unit within the KDD Lab dedicated to complex network modeling and analysis. In 2017, he was formally appointed Research Coordinator of the KDD Lab Complex Network research unit.
